This week at School Headteacher's message

One of the things I most look forward to with the summer approaching is the chance to catch up on my 'to be read pile'. Miss Bailey did a great piece for the newsletter all about the Summer Reading Challenge and a book she is excited to read. The children's book I can't wait to read is Katherine Rundell's Impossible Creatures. Katherine Rundell wrote Wolf Wilder, one of my favourites in the Year 6 Novel Study Curriculum. My adult pick for the summer is Lucy Foley's Midnight Feast. Her debut, The Hunting Party, was a brilliant thriller!

Parents and children - please let us know what you are planning to read over the summer. We want to keep this super momentum we have with reading going; there is no better way to get excited about reading than talking about it and sharing some cracking reads.

The big game looms. This is such an incredible moment in history for our nation. Let's hope that this time, it truly is coming home! Enjoy the game... if that is ever possible as an England fan!

Have a great weekend,
Mr Ringrose

Summer Reading Challenge

This academic year we have talked constantly to the children about the importance of regular reading, and we have celebrated many successes each week in assembly. Altogether the children have read an incredible 502,415,174 words (we will announce the class with the winning total next week).

It is so important that our children continue to read over the summer. Children (who are on AR) will still be able to quiz (Monday - Friday) throughout the holidays.

Every summer the library sets a reading challenge. The children will need to read 6 books over the holidays and will win small prizes and receive a certificate at the end, if they complete the challenge. I hope lots of children will participate. I will send more information out on Seesaw today.

100% for our attendance winners this week. Well done to Seals class

Upcoming events
