This week at School Assistant Headteacher's message

This week at Mevagissey, we have been taking part in Antbullying Week, focusing on the theme of 'Choose Respect'. Our discussions have highlighted the importance of acknowledging and respecting the differences among our peers, many of which may not be immediately visible. We have highlighted the understanding that someone's day may feel very different from our own, fostering empathy and compassion within our school community. Alongside Antbullying Week, today, the children have reflected on the significance of Children in Need, exploring the incredible support provided for families. We take immense pride in how our children have consistently demonstrated support for one another, embodying the Mevagissey Way, where being 'Respectful' is fundamental.

During our PHSE sessions, the whole school are currently doing the unit 'celebrate differences'. We do this every year and discuss themes related to race, religion, and Special Educational Needs in an age-appropriate manner. The rich, knowledge-led conversations have come from a place of genuine kindness amongst the children, encouraging them to share their own experiences and insights with each other.

Wishing you all a fantastic weekend, and we look forward to welcoming the children back on Monday.

Warm regards,

Mrs Rees
